RICHARD STALLMAN

A Free Digital Society

Wednesday
14 March
6pm-8.30pm

Town Plaza Auditorium
NUS University Town
1 CREATE WAY, Level 1

More details:
freesoftware.sg

Activities directed at "including" more people in the use of digital technology are predicated on the assumption that such inclusion is invariably a good thing. It appears so, when judged solely by immediate practical convenience. However, if we also judge in terms of human rights, whether digital inclusion is good or bad depends on what kind of digital world we are to be included in. If we wish to work towards digital inclusion as a goal, it behooves us to make sure it is the good kind.

NUS National University of Singapore | University Scholars Programme